At 21, Sania Mirza knows how to live life queensize. When the tennis sensation is in town recently for a promotional event for Deutsche Bank, We caught up with her for a Chat.

Between tennis and other things, do you have a life?

Of course I have a life, I've a great life. We do our own stuff when we can, in fact I am planning to watch a movie.

No wild partying?

I don't drink and I don't smoke. But yes, on occasions, I do like to party with close friends.

Isn't sports the new fodder for Bollywood?

I haven't seen Goal yet. I saw Chak De and loved it. It's an inspiring film for women's sports.

So, do you look forward to a movie on tennis, with a character based on you perhaps?

(Laughs) Why not. Something that gives tennis an exposure and inspires younger people to take it up is great.

You follow junior level tennis..

Back in Hyderabad where I practice, there are some girls I have been seeing since they were kids. They're about 14-15 and I see a lot of potential in them. I won't take names because it's not fair.

Ever considered any profession besides tennis..

I'd like to be remembered as a great tennis player. I have no intention to get into Bollywood. But I'm studying psychology, so you never know; I might want to be a psychologist one day.

By Indian standards you've reached the 'marriageable age'. Don't people comment?

Of course they do. Everyone has the right to ask and I always politely say that I have no plans for the next few years.
